

2024 Index of Chinese City Capacity to Actively Respond to Population Ageing is a comprehensive and authoritative research report compiled by the Department of Economic Forecasting of the State Information Center. It aims to enhance society's capacity to proactively address the aging population through a "city health check" approach. The index measures five dimensions of ageing supports across 337 cities including: age-inclusive policies, levels of investment, age-responsive services, enabling social environments and the development of the silver economy. The report also releases a list of the top 100 cities leading in actively adapting to the aging population.

The top 60 cities among the overall capacity indices and the five specific thematic indices have been designated as Leading Cities in the report. These leading cities are further categorized as Outstanding Cities (Top 20), Excellent Cities (Top 21 to 40), and Good Cities (Top 41 to 60). The report also compares the city capacity index rankings between 2023 and 2024, and publishes a list of the top 20 cities that have made the most progress in their rankings.

The publicly released data used in the report is supported by CEI data.
